Letter to Family

Unit 4

Our class will begin a unit in language arts in which students will read two epics and four myths from ancient Greece. This unit examines ancient Greece through epic stories and myths about heroes facing enormous and frightening challenges and meeting those challenges with bravery, skill, and ingenuity. The epics, the Iliad and Odyssey, are two of the earliest and most influential stories in Western literature. They communicate the values and traditions of the ancient Greeks and their thoughts about love, fate, and tragedy.

Although the Iliad and Odyssey were originally composed and recited by the poet Homer, students will read versions of them that have been edited and written in modern English prose.

Stories from ancient Greece are vital for understanding the origins of Western literature and the foundations of some of our longest-lasting character types and dramatic themes. The stories composed by the Greeks inspired not only members of their own civilization, but also subsequent cultures, especially the Romans, and through them, our own contemporary culture. Students will recognize that modern heroic stories owe a lot to their origins in these Greek myths.

This unit will also give students the opportunity to encounter mythology in detail. Students will be immersed in a culture and worldview that challenges them and provokes reflection about what we value and how that compares to what people in another time and place valued. Students will use this experience and insight when composing a myth of their own.

Because these works were produced in another time and place, students will encounter themes that they may find challenging or unpleasant. The Iliad, especially, is a war story that deals with conflict, violence, death, and negative emotions throughout. The Odyssey and the other Greek myths were produced by a culture that did not highly value women's rights or agency. It is important to know that the unit does not endorse these behaviors or values and provides opportunities for teachers to call out and raise for discussion any attitudes or themes that contrast with our own modern sensibilities or that may prove troubling in other ways.

Write a Myth: Drafting Planner

Use this page to begin drafting your myth. The exercise below will help you pick an opening for your myth.

Additionally, you should think about the perspective your narrator should adopt. Generally, myths tell about ancient events. The storyteller is often not a participant in the story. This means that, in your myth, you should use a third-person narrator who speaks using third-person pronouns such as he, she, and they.

Consider using one of the following openings in your myth:

- Before _____ created the world ...
- Long, long ago ...
- In times past ...
- There was a time, long ago, when ...
- This is a story about a time when ...
- You may have heard the story of _____, but ...
- Gods, tell me the story of _____ !

Circle one of the options above, and then explain your choice: In what ways does this opening get readers interested in your myth?

Comparing Myths and Epics

*Use this Venn diagram to compare the myths and epics you have read in this unit. In the left circle, write features of epics like the Odyssey and Iliad. In the right circle, write features of myths like Orpheus and Eurydice. In the center, write features common to both.*

Unit Assessment—The Iliad, the Odyssey, and Other Greek Stories

Today you will read two selections. After reading the first selection, you will answer several questions based on it. Then, you will read the second selection and answer several questions based on it. Some of the questions have two parts. You should answer Part A of the question before you answer Part B.

“Husband and Wife Together”

1. But for Penelope, joyful surprise again turned to doubt. “Dear nurse,” she said, “it cannot be. Some god has taken the shape of a man to punish the suitors for the wrong they have done. Odysseus will never return home, but is lying dead in some far-off land.”
2. “Truly, you are slow to believe,” said Eurycleia. “But I can give you proof, which I saw with my own eyes—the scar of the wound that a wild boar gave him when he was but a lad. I saw it when I washed his feet, and I wanted to tell you about it, but he put his hand on my mouth and would not let me speak, for so he thought it best. On my life, it is Odysseus in the hall below.”
3. She took Penelope by the hand and led her from the upper chamber into the hall. Odysseus was standing by a tall pillar. He waited for his wife to come and speak to him. But Penelope stood still and gazed upon him, and made no step towards him. One moment she seemed to know him, and the next moment not, for he was still in his beggar’s rags.
4. Then Telemachus said, “Mother, is your heart so hard? Here is my father. Will you not go to him or speak with him?”
5. Penelope said, “My mind is amazed and I have no strength to speak, nor even to look on him face to face. If this is indeed Odysseus who has come home, a place must be prepared for him, and in time we will come to understand one another better.”
6. Then Odysseus said to Telemachus, “Go now and wash off the stains of battle. I will stay and speak with your mother.”

7. Then to Penelope he said, “Strange lady, is your heart indeed so hard? No other woman in the world, I think, would remain so distant from her husband who, after so much toil and so many trials, has come back after twenty years to his own home. Is there no place for me here? Must I sleep again here in the hall, on the stranger’s bed?”

Questions

The following question has two parts. Answer Part A, and then answer Part B.

1. Part A: In paragraph 7, what is Odysseus’s chief concern?

- A. that his wife will not accept him
- B. that he will be unable to find a bed
- C. that his wife is acting in an unusual way
- D. that he will have to keep searching for a home

Part B: How does Odysseus communicate his concern to Penelope?

- A. through name-calling
- B. by posing multiple questions
- C. by reminding her of their love
- D. by comparing her to other women

2. What are the “stains of battle” that Odysseus tells Telemachus to wash off?

- B. blood and sweat
- C. dirt and oil
- D. soot and smoke stains

“Cupid and Psyche”

1. Psyche meanwhile wandered day and night, without food or repose, in search of her husband. Casting her eyes on a lofty mountain having on its brow a magnificent temple, she sighed and said to herself, “Perhaps my love, my lord, inhabits there,” and directed her steps there.
2. She had no sooner entered than she saw heaps of corn, some in loose ears and some in sheaves, with mingled ears of barley. Scattered about lay sickles and rakes, and all the instruments of harvest without order, as if thrown carelessly out of the weary reapers’ hands in the sultry hours of the day.
3. This confusion the pious Psyche put an end to, by separating and sorting everything to its proper place and kind, believing that she ought to neglect none of the gods, but endeavor by her piety to engage them all in her behalf. The holy Ceres, whose temple it was, finding her so religiously employed, thus spoke to her: “O Psyche, truly worthy of our pity, though I cannot shield you from the frowns of Venus, yet I can teach you how best to allay her displeasure. Go, then, and voluntarily surrender yourself to your lady and sovereign, and try by modesty and submission to win her forgiveness, and perhaps her favor will restore you the husband you have lost.”
4. Psyche obeyed the commands of Ceres and took her way to the temple of Venus, endeavoring to fortify her mind and ruminating on what she should say and how best propitiate the angry goddess, feeling that the issue was doubtful and perhaps fatal.

Questions

The following question has two parts. Answer part A, and then part B.

7. Part A: What is Psyche’s motivation to “wander day and night” as described in paragraph 1?

Part B: What text evidence supports your answer in Part A?

8. In paragraph 3, Psyche is told the following:

Go, then, and voluntarily surrender yourself to your lady and sovereign, and try by modesty and submission to win her forgiveness, and perhaps her favor will restore you the husband you have lost.

What does it mean for Psyche to “voluntarily surrender” herself?

- A. She must choose to give in to the goddess.
- B. She must continue to oppose the goddess.
- C. She must come up with an offering for the goddess.
- D. She must reject the goddess’s power.

10. In your own words, summarize the cause of Psyche’s problems and how she is offered a way to solve them.
